Following close upon the announcement of the engagement, the marriage of Miss Margaret Pilon, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin P. Pilon and Edw. Stollweg, was celebrated at noon yesterday. The wedding was hurriedly arranged because the bridegroom who was recently commissioned a second lieutenant in the army is subject to orders. The ceremony was solemnized by Monsignor Mackin in the rectory of St. Paul's Church, was marked by great simplicity and was witnessed by only the immediate families of the young couple. Both the bride and bridegroom were unattended.

The bride was given away by her brother, Raymond Pilon, and wore a traveling costume. Lieut. and Mrs. Dove left immediately after the ceremony for a short wedding trip. They will be married at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., after November 23 when Lieut. Dove must report for duty.

Sketched at the De Saulles Murder Trial

This sketch of a scene at the De Saulles murder trial was made expressly for The Washington Herald by Special Artist De Alton Valentine. It shows Mrs. De Saulles as she appeared in court wearing a simple, white shirtwaist and dark skirt. In the upper left hand corner is Supreme Court Justice Manning. Below, in front of the judge, is the clerk, with his face partially hidden by the broad shoulder of Henry A. Uterhart, chief counsel for Mrs. De Saulles. To the reader's right is District Attorney Charles R. Weeks.

White Hairs Tell Silent Story of Mrs. De Saulles' Young Woman Shows Effects of Grief as She Pleads to Charge of Murdering Her Husband, Says Writer.

It has been due either to mismanagement or their families' selfishness. The soldiers need sweaters much more than most of us need special meals and personal service on Sunday. It is right that women should do Sunday work for us under normal conditions, they should knit for the soldiers on Sunday—if they wish.

But there are other considerations, and we may as well be honest with ourselves regarding them. Much as our boys need sweaters, they need bullets more. And England has discovered a seven-day week for munition workers, and our government is insisting upon an eight-hour day, even on war jobs.

It's true most women who knit sweaters don't work as hard or as steadily as munition workers. If they do work as hard, they have no more right to knit sweaters on Sunday than the munition workers have to work seven days a week; and if they don't, why can't they put in more time week days so they won't be compelled to knit on Sunday?

Honestly—can't I see many women knit on Sunday because it's a pretty good way to pass the time? Couldn't they turn out as much if they knitted more systematically during the week?

This doesn't apply to women whose work occupies every week-day moment and who are eager to help do their bit in knitting.

It's a question whether under certain circumstances some women have the right to exhaust their strength and nerves even by knitting for soldiers on Sunday or any other day. As for knitting on Sunday during church services—only one who hasn't even a glimmering of what such services are for would justify it. No woman, no matter how patriotic, has a right to force her husband upon her fellow-worshippers who sincerely desire for a brief period, to turn their eyes and their minds away from knitting needles.

If she would rather knit than worship, it is her privilege to remain away from church. Perhaps she can do both at the same time. But most people cannot worship while others are knitting.

And the minister can't preach as effectively to an array of socks and knitting needles as he can to a congregation of upturned, eager faces. After all Sunday knitting—like most other aspects of the Sunday question—must be settled each one for himself. There are too many exceptions to lay down an arbitrary rule.

As I caught a view of them Bianca De Saulles put up her hand as though she too had perhaps discovered them for the first time this morning and she was still wondering what special grief had put them there.

"This one is for the long, weary months I was waiting the coming of little John, when I had lost my girlishness and had become ugly and my husband left me for other gay and more beautiful women."

"This one came from hurt pride. This was for that awful time when my world had crumbled and I was disintegrated before my eyes and the only thing that seemed mine was my baby and they took him from me, too."

Love Causes Tragedy. "This gleaming white hair is the sad answer to my longing—my sleepless nights and lonely days without my boy."

"And this one has bleached with my tears all these long months I have been alone incarcerated in a cell with only my despairing thoughts for company."

Ah, what tells those gray hairs among the beautiful brown tresses of Bianca De Saulles were! To me those white threads told the whole story of Bianca De Saulles' agony. Better that she will probably tell it on the witness stand when she faces the jury next week with her own story.

Confessions of a Wife

A THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

Yes, little book, I cannot go to sleep until I have quieted my tingling nerves by making that Thanksgiving proclamation. I want to put on paper a kind of vow that I am going to appoint not only some day in November, but a part of each, succeeding day in my life as a time of praise and thanksgiving, and I duly recommend to myself that in a spirit of charity and love, and with my heart full of gratitude for the blessed privilege of living in this beautiful world, and for the capacity of enjoying to the utmost all the spiritual and mental gifts with which I am endowed, I am truly thankful.

I will give praise; for the days crowned with the wonderful rapture of love, which have been mine in greater and more blissful fullness than I deserve.

I will give praise; for the hours chastened by sorrow, which make me more patient and sympathetic with others in trouble.

I will give praise; for the time filled with work of hands and brain so arduous that I forget the petty worries and annoyances that come to the idle and self-centered.

I will give praise; for the knowledge that I am a part of the great plan, and for the clear vision that has made me see how small a place I fill in the scheme of creation.

I will give thanks; for all the great experiences of life, its grief which teaches me the value of its happiness, its hard work which makes rest a state of delight; its big cares which make me understand the contentment to be found in small pleasures.

I will give thanks; for the love of my friends and the hate of my enemies, for both spur me on to a better and nobler existence, that I may realize the ideal of those who trust me and prove false the assumption of the suspicious.

I will give thanks; that each day I find something new for which to be grateful and the power of understanding that this world can be made a paradise to a loving, humble, sympathetic heart.

There, little book, that is just you and me. I think I'll try to read it over every day.

LIBEL ON COLD PACK METHODS REFUTED

Wartime Nightmare Concerning Canned Vegetables Shown Up.

Danger of poisoning from vegetables preserved by the cold pack method is a war-time nightmare which has no place outside enemy propaganda, declared Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the National Emergency Food Garden Commission, yesterday.

At East Lansing, Mich., where 425 Michigan housewives and girls have canned 5,687 jars in three years by the cold pack method recommended by the government, reports show only 685 jars spoiled or lost in two years—one hundred—a result much better than obtained by any other method.

Method Is Libeled. The survey was conducted by Anna B. Cowles, State club leader for girls, to counteract the work of certain agencies which have been attempting to discredit the cold pack method.

The National Emergency Food Garden Commission has made a careful research on this subject," continued Mr. Pack, "and has the support of Dr. O. H. Benson and Dr. H. Lang, of the Department of Agriculture, in the statement that the danger of poisoning from vegetables prepared by the cold pack method is less than the danger of lockjaw from pin scratches."

"Even when present in the vegetables at the outset, the bacillus botulinus which produces poison is killed by exposure to a temperature of 176 degrees Fahrenheit for thirty minutes."

Vegetables Are Sterilized. "As the cold pack method involves sterilizing vegetables for from one to four hours at a temperature of 212 degrees, it is obvious that no danger exists when directions have been followed carefully."

"The one essential is that no canned goods be eaten which show visible signs of spoilage. When there is doubt the safest plan is to throw them away. Although all danger of botulism may be avoided by boiling the contents for a few minutes, home canned goods are safe and necessary."

Neat and Cozy Quarters For Maid Worth While

Give your maid's room thought and care and you will find that she will work the better for it. Pleasant surroundings have an agreeable effect on everybody, and make us more cheerful. The cook and the waitress are human, after all, and like pretty things as well as the rest of us.

TRAIN YOUR HAIR AS AN ACTRESS DOES

No class of people devotes as much time to beauty as do actresses, and no class must be so careful to retain and develop their charms. Inquiry develops the information that in hair care they find it dangerous to shampoo with any makeshift hair cleaner. The majority say that to have the best hair wash and scalp stimulant at a cost of about three cents, one need only get a package of canthox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use the hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are quickly dissolved and entirely disappear when you rinse the hair. After this your hair will be so fluffy it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—Adv.

Backache of Women

How this Woman Suffered and Was Relieved.

Fort Fairfield, Maine.—"For many months I suffered from backache caused by female troubles so I was unable to do my house work. I took treatments for it but received no help whatever. Then some of my friends asked why I did not try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and my backache soon disappeared and I felt like a different woman, and now have a healthy little baby girl and do all my house work. I will always praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to women who suffer as I did."—Mrs. ALTON D. OAKES, Fort Fairfield, Maine.
